Charge NumberViolation

One

There is probable cause to believe that the offender violated special condition number five that he to pay restitution in the amount of $20,729.50.

As of August 14, 2008, the offender owes $20,189.50 toward his restitution obligation. The offender has made only three restitution payments while on supervised release. Evidence in support of this charge is the Case Inquiry Reports from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, San Francisco Division, and the Western District of Washington.

Two

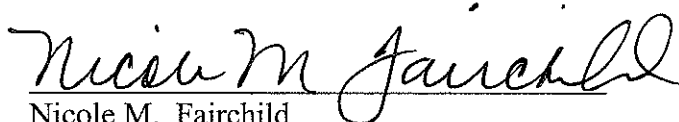

There is probable cause to believe that the offender violated special condition number seven that he not incur new credit charges or open additional lines of credit without approval of the United States Probation Officer.

On August 7, 2008, I met with the offender and he signed a release for me to obtain his credit history report. The report showed that the offender secured a credit card through the First Bank of Delaware in March 2008, and obtained a line of credit through the People's Community Partnership Federal Credit Union in April 2008, without prior approval from the probation officer. The offender had previously been verbally reprimanded on December 17, 2007, for opening new credit without prior permission of the probation officer.

Evidence in support of this charge is the credit report obtained from CBC Innovis dated August 14, 2008.

Based on the foregoing, there is probable cause to believe that Lenardo Lee Bowden violated the conditions of his supervision.

Respectfully submitted,

Nicole M. Fairchild

U.S. Probation Officer
